Deep cuts to Medicaid put rural hospitals in the crosshairs

Social Surge - What's Trending

There are Trump's claims about jobs. then there are the numbers

True, inflation will reduce the effective size of either increase to some extent. And population growth could increase demand for Medicaid and other social programs, although population growth in the U.S. is the slowest it's been in nearly a century.

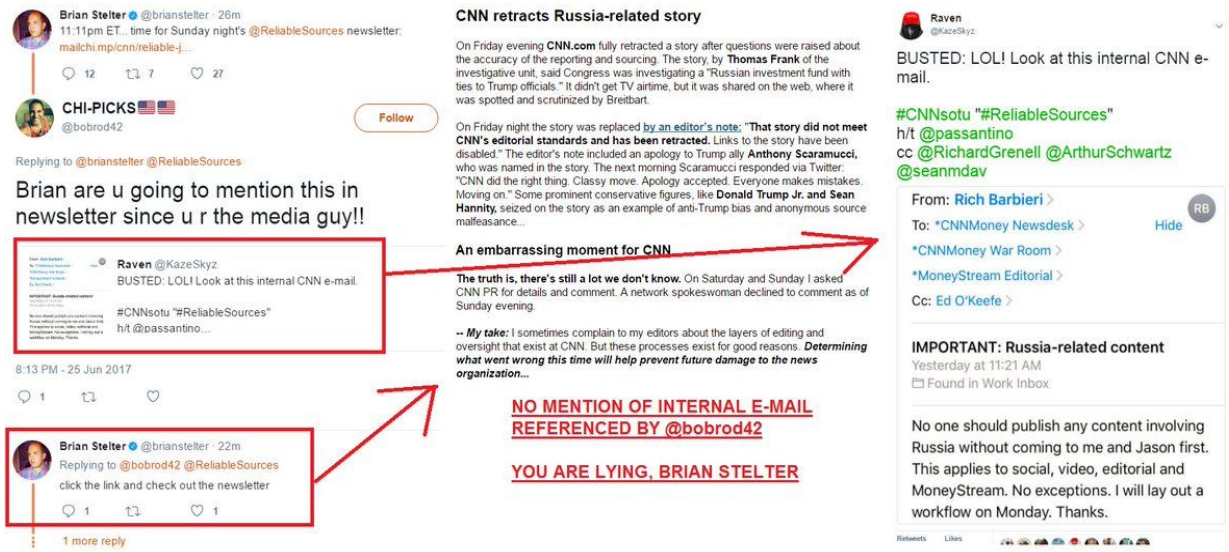

Either way, the Medicaid budget is going to grow. But under Trump's proposal, it would grow more slowly. This is how Democrats and the media can scream about supposedly savage "cuts" to the program.

The same goes for Medicare. Under the current baseline, Medicare would grow from $593 billion to $1.19 trillion. Under the Trump budget, it would grow to only (!) $1.16 trillion.

Correction: June 29, 2017

A White House Memo article on Monday about President Trump's deflections and denials about Russia referred incorrectly to the source of an intelligence assessment that said Russia orchestrated hacking attacks during last year's presidential election. The assessment was made by four intelligence agencies — the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the National Security Agency. The assessment was not approved by all 17 organizations in the American intelligence community.

You tend not to spend too much time contemplating Tim Russert's innermost thoughts when you're 100 feet under water, breathing through a narrow tube, soaring past the ocean wall in slow motion, staring at 200-year-old sea tortoises, parrot fish, and coral that have no concern for love or career. A week of no news, no television—nothing more than books and the company of a handful of divers and fisherman. I had no idea of the storm clouds brewing in D.C.; the weather in the Caymans was 80 and sunny, the diving was clear, and my tan was coming in even and had yet to peel.

HARLOW: -- in this interview. When the -- when the president said to Lester Holt -- when he was asked about Russian interference in the election he said, "if there was hacking." He questioned the finding of all 17 U.S. intelligence agencies. He then questioned whether we have 17 intelligenceagencies, which we do. But then also yesterday he signed, in the middle of the day, this executive order starting an entire commission to look into voter fraud, a claim -- an unsubstantiated claim he's made there have been millions of people who voted -- you know, fraudulently voted in this election. Is the president putting more trust in what someone points to as conspiracy theories or unsubstantiated claims --

SCHLAPP: There's a --

HARLOW: -- than he is the finding, Matt, of 17 intelligence agencies?

CNN U.S. | World | Politics | Money | Opinion | Health | Entertainment | Tech | Style | Travel | Sports | Video | VR Live TV U.S. Edition +

SCHLAPP: Poppy, can you let me answer?

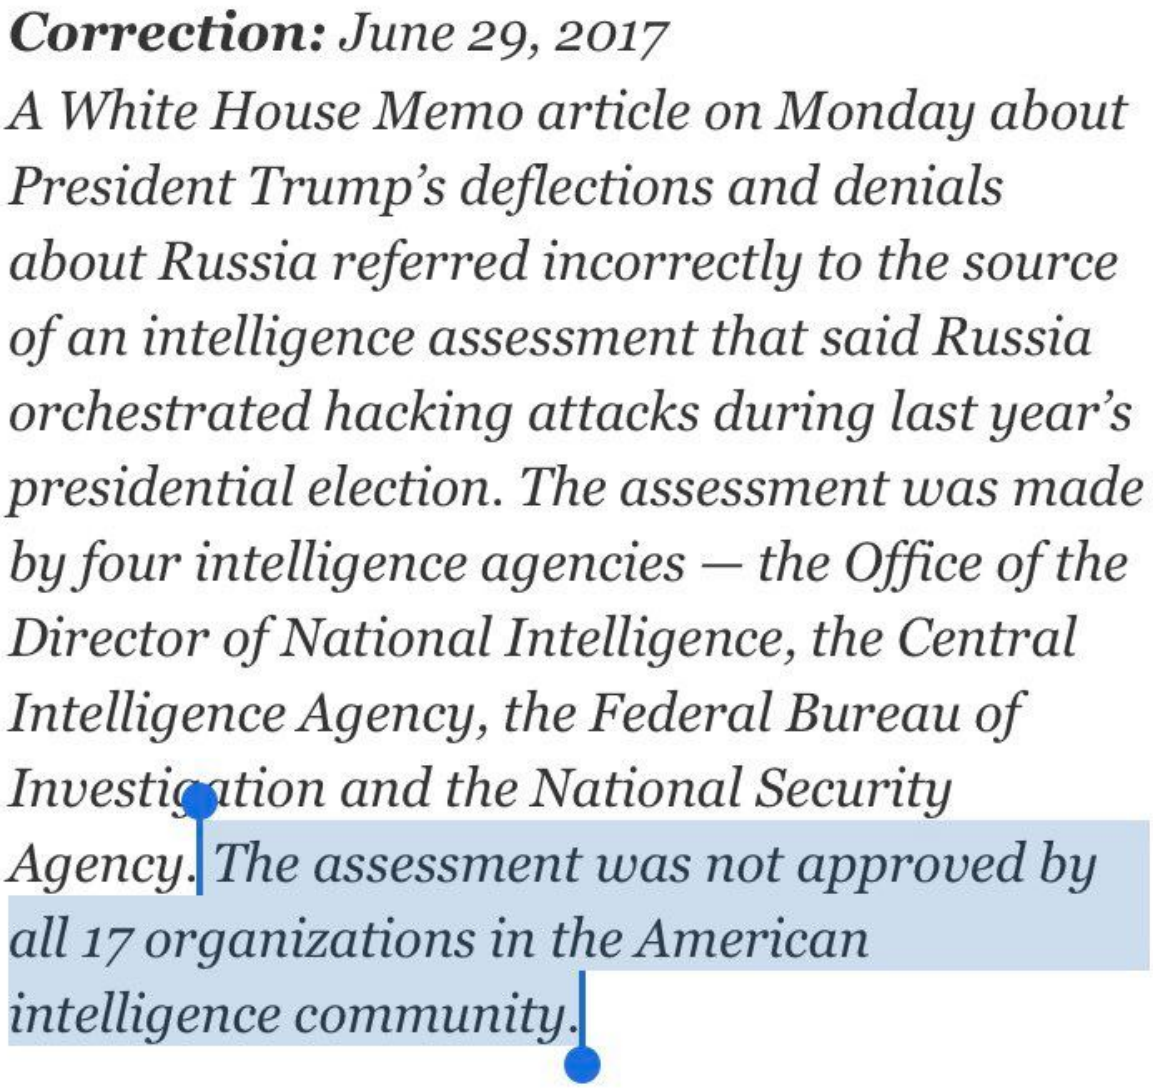

HARLOW: Sure, but I'm saying he seems to be giving more -- my question was is he giving more credence to an unsubstantiated claim than he is to the findings of 17 intelligence agencies.

SCHLAPP: OK, so I don't know which one you want to me go. I can go to the election one and talk about that, which is this is an issue within our politics. I think we should all be against illegal voting. We have a question about when this illegal voting happens. We have convictions on the books. This commission intends to take voting

Clarification: Trump-Russia stories

Jun 30, 5:32 PM EDT

WASHINGTON (AP) — In stories published April 6, June 2, June 26 and June 29, The Associated Press reported that all 17 U.S. intelligence agencies have agreed that Russia tried to influence the 2016 election to benefit Donald Trump. That assessment was based on information collected by three agencies — the FBI, CIA and National Security Agency — and published by the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, which represents all U.S. intelligence agencies. Not all 17 intelligence agencies were involved in reaching the assessment.

SCARAMUCCI: Well, listen, I've looked at all of this information, and even before I came on this morning I was looking at our daily brief. And it's still a little bit inconclusive. And so, I'm not here to say it happened or...

CAMEROTA: How? Just help me understand. How is it inconclusive when the CIA and, as you know, 17 intelligence agencies say it happened?

SCARAMUCCI: OK. But there's been no source attributed to those people, No. 1.

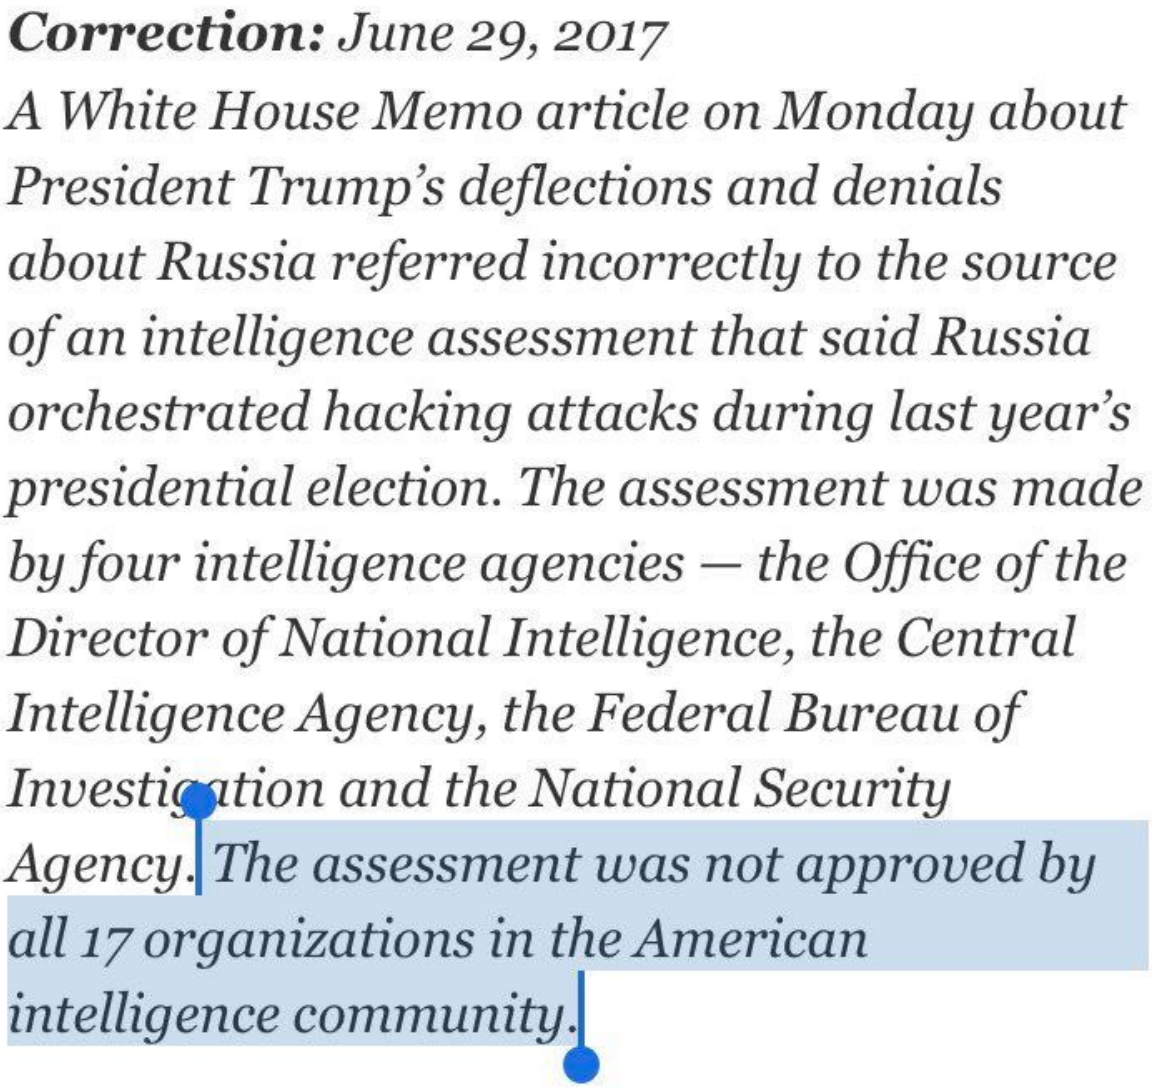

CAMEROTA: Sure. I hear you. But if it turns out that, yes, you can confirm from these 17 intelligence agencies that Russia did, in fact, meddle, then what would President-elect Trump do?

SCARAMUCCI: Alisyn, I think we've got to -- again, I think we've got to wait for the information. It's not -- I don't want to shirk the question, but I think it's unfair to throw up a speculative balloon like that and then ask us to speculate on it.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In stories published April 6, June 2, June 26 and June 29, The Associated Press reported that all 17 U.S. intelligence agencies have agreed that Russia tried to influence the 2016 election to benefit Donald Trump. That assessment was based on information collected by three agencies — the FBI, CIA and National Security Agency — and published by the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, which represents all U.S. intelligence agencies. Not all 17 intelligence agencies were involved in reaching the assessment.
